The exports at Portland last week were valued at $34,851.10

Seventeen children have been sent thus far to South Paris by the Fresh Air Fund, and fourteen have been offered free board at West Falmouth.

Passenger engine No. 99 was delivered, Monday, to the Maine Central by the Portland Company. The company will execute an order for ten locomotives for the Boston & Maine.

F. L. Bartlett, of Portland, has just completed a 60-ton water jacket smelting furnace for the Detroit Copper Company of Morenci, Arizona, and it will probably be shipped on its journey to the far southwest this week.

The Oxford Bar Association will hold their reunion this year at Cushing's Island some day in the first week of September, taking dinner at the Ottawa House. An early meeting of the committee will be held and a full and interesting programme be arranged.

Mrs. Erastus Cobb of Saccarappa went to a picnic Saturday leaving her three daughters who were aged 16, 10 and 4 years at home. The youngest child was sleepy in the afternoon and was put to bed for a nap. Later her sister heard her scream and went up stairs to find her and the bed clothes in flames. She died from the effects of her burns.

Dr. Blaisdell, of Brunswick, a gentleman over eighty years old, while out blueberrying, Saturday morning, attempted to get over a barbed wire fence and his clothes caught so that he could not free himself, and he hung there nearly an hour. The brakeman on the freight train from Portland saw him when the train went by and sent a man from Brunswick depot to relieve him. He was nearly exhausted.

Lester E. Percival, of Augusta, a brakeman on the Portland & Ogdensburg who recently had his leg badly crushed while making up a train, is doing very nicely at the Maine General Hospital. At first it was feared that his leg would have to be amputated, but the surgeons have decided that there will be no need of this and that he will eventually recover the use of the limb.

Hon. Moody Boynton has drawn the plans for a bicycle engine to be constructed by the Portland Company. The scheme is to construct engines run on one large wheel. The wheel is to be grooved and will run on two rails, one on the ground and one suspended over the engine. Mr. Boynton thinks that by his scheme he can obtain a speed of 100 miles an hour. He intends to put the thing to a practical test and see whether there is anything in it. The wheel which the Portland Company are constructing is eight feet in diameter.

Mr. J. N. Reed has been treasurer of the Maine Odd Fellows Relief Association for fourteen years. When he first took the office, which was the second year of the existence of the Association, the membership was only about 300 and the total amount paid in to him was only about five hundred dollars. This last year over ninety thousand dollars were paid in; during the fourteen years Mr. Reed has been treasurer, $647,820 have been paid out by him in death benefits. All this money has gone to widows and orphans and other dependent relatives.

The annual expenditure of the sultan's household is over $41,000,000.

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

The Story of a Fight for Two Lives.

[Bath Cor. Lewiston Journal.]

Monday morning's early boat from Boothbay brought up the dead body of Fred E. Upham of Dorchester, Mass.,—and the most remarkable, most tragic story of pluck, suffering and heroism that has been told of the Maine sea coast for many a day.

On Saturday, Upham, who was a promising young man of twenty-one years, from Dorchester, Mass., and was spending his vacation at the Chase House, Squirrel Island, went on an all-day fishing trip with a companion of about his own age, Mr. F. J. Thrasher of Boston. In the afternoon while they were shifting the ballast, their little craft capsized off Pumpkin Rock and they both went overboard, clinging to the boat. After a few moments they scrambled on the bottom of the boat. They then canted her over a little and pulled out her mast, and proposed to right her. They had no difficulty in doing this, but found they could not get the water out of her, and she would be of more service to them the other side up. So they upset her again and got on her bottom.

By this time, Upham was completely exhausted, but Thrasher, who is perfectly at home in the water, was full of grit. It was an unpleasant day and no boats were in sight. The nearest shore was Pumpkin Rock, a rough, dangerous ledge inhabited only by gulls, and they were half a mile from that.

"Fred, I'm going to tow you to Pumpkin Rock," said Thrasher.

"Oh, no! you can't do it," said Upham.

But Thrasher shoved off, seized the painter, and began to pulling the upturned boat with Upham on it, he and him. It was a big load, and the swimmer made small progress.

Upham seemed to lose all his courage.

"Good God! You're not making any headway," said he.

"Yes, I am. We're getting there," said the undaunted Thrasher.

Upham was weak and trembling and could scarcely keep his hold on the boat. Now and then a wave dashed over him and weakened him still more. His sufferings were pitiful, and the brave Thrasher says the poor fellow was in such a condition that he did not seem to care much whether he ever got ashore or not.

But all the time Thrasher was manfully struggling with the sea and pulling the dead load behind him. At last he got so near the ledge that he could touch the bottom.

"Hurrah! We're all right. I'm on my feet," he shouted, panting, to his half-fainting companion.

He was so exhausted that he could barely pull the boat behind him as he labored up the rough, steep side of the ledge. But in the moment of his triumph over the sea and his confidence of having saved his own and his companion's life, a great wave rolled back from Pumpkin Rock and

SWEPT UPHAM OFF THE BOAT.

Thrasher did not give him up even then. He let the boat go, and dashed down under the sea after Upham. Soon he had his lifeless form in his arms, and tottering—almost sinking from his terrible labors, was wading through the breakers to a dry place on the ledge. The wave had finished poor Upham.

Weak as he was, Thrasher did everything he could to revive him. Had any help or any appliances been available, the unfortunate young man's life might have been saved. But Thrasher was alone with him on a barren rock, and could hardly hold up his own head. He rolled Upham's limp body over his knee and tried to get the water out of his stomach and lungs but he could do nothing. He could see that there was a spark of life in Upham, yet; could detect a faint heart-beat now and then, but had to endure the horrible agony of seeing his friend die in his arms after he had fought for him so long and so hard and had come so near saving him. Could there be disappointment more bitter?

Thrasher kept up a keen look for a sail or a boat or any sign of a human being, but the night closed in and no omen of help had be seen except a schooner that was too far away to notice his signals. Still he did not despair.

The problem now was to save his own life. Upham was a dead man. Nothing could be done for him but to protect him from the sea-gulls which swarm on Pumpkin Rock and with their beaks. Thrasher found a pole on the shore and used it almost constantly to frighten the birds away. He felt his limbs stiffening with cold. When the boat capsized he had on a thin flannel tennis suit. In his scrambling up the rock through the surf he had torn it to shreds and had made great rents in his underclothing. He was almost naked and his long stay in the water had given him a dreadful chill. He danced and ran about to restore his circulation and then looked for a more sheltered place in the rock where he could find some protection from the wind and pass the night. The coziest nook in the rock had been appropriated by the gulls. It was a cavity surrounded by rocky walls lined with feathers and guano. Uninviting as it looked, it was the warmest place he could find, and Thrasher determined to drive out the gulls and take possession. This he had little difficulty in doing. He dragged his friend's corpse into the gulls' nest and cuddled down there by his side for the night.

The hours passed with torturing slowness which only easily his position could realize. He says he was not very cold, and after a few fights with the gulls was able to get a few snatches of sleep. He never once gave up his courage or hope, through all that long and fearful night.

As soon as the first light of morning shone, Thrasher [illegible] to stir about the ... [illegible] the ... He did not ... other day of weary, hungry, agonized waiting. He never was so hungry in his life, never so cold, never so tired.

He had no watch but supposed it was about four o'clock in the afternoon. The sky was dark and he thought another night would soon be upon him. There was no promise of rescue. The promise of spending the night on the rock again threatened him. It appalled him. "I would rather die than do it," he said to himself.

He saw that the nearest habitation was on Heron Island, about a mile and a half away, where were the huts of a few fishermen. At low tide, a small ledge comes out of water between Pumpkin Rock and Heron Island. He fastened his eye on this bit of ledge, saw that it would be a resting-place, and half-starved and benumbed as he was, determined to try to to Heron Island! About ten o'clock, Sunday morning, the fisher folks on Heron Island saw a bare-headed young man dressed in rags with bruises and scratches all over his body, staggering towards them. It was young Thrasher. He had swum the mile and a half from Pumpkin Rock to Heron Island and landed through the surf. The fishermen could hardly believe his story. They thought it incredible that any man could have done such a thing.

Said one of them: "I wouldn't ha' tried it for no money. I would ha' laid on Pumpkin Rock a week fust. Why, man! The waters about here is alive with sharks and dog-fish. Ye didn't have no one chance in a hundred uv dodgin' um, even if ye could 'a' made the swim!"

They took the shivering fellow into a house, warmed him, fed him and put some clothes on him. Then three fishermen went in a dory to Pumpkin Rock, found Upham's corpse surrounded by gulls, and took it and Thrasher to Boothbay. An undertaker took charge of the dead, and the body was brought up on the boat, Monday morning, as stated, with the certificate of the selectmen of Boothbay on the box.

After his heroic struggles and wonderful manifestation of physical endurance, Thrasher now has before him what he says is the hardest act of all. He must deliver his friend's dead body to a prostrate father and mother. He notified them by telegraph from Bath. This dispatch gave them their first news of Saturday's tragedy.

Only last week young Upham's sister wrote to him from home, "Take care not to get drowned."

of these thrilling adventures is a smooth-faced, clean, brisk and intelligent-looking fellow, of medium height, compact figure. He is as brown as a nut, and although slight, has the limbs of an athlete. He says he has frequently taken long swims and would not have thought twice of the distance between the two islands, if he had not been faint and exhausted. His hands, arms, legs, and other parts of his body are a net-work of cuts and scratches which tell better than words of the terrible struggles he had with the surf-beaten rocks. He is a modest young man and tells his story in an unaffected way that heightens the quality of his heroism and increases the admiration of all who hear it.

His sad experience and deep sorrow are plainly written in his resolute face. He expresses great satisfaction at having been able to save the body, if no more. He says that Upham was completely unnerved as soon as he was capsized.

Mr. Thrasher is employed in the box department of the Boston post office. If his brave deeds of Saturday and Sunday do not secure for him promotion and the medal of the Humane Society, then he will not get his dues. He is a noble specimen of manhood, and every passenger on the boat looked at him with respectful and wondering eyes.

An attempt was made, Sunday, to find the capsized boat, which Thrasher let go when he struck out for his friend, after the wave had washed him off, but no trace could be found of her. She probably went to pieces on Pumpkin Rock.

The Fashions.

[From the New York Evening Post.]

The new passementeries furnish a wide variety of ornaments. One, a very pretty corsage trimming, consists of a collar, to which are attached tabs of moire ribbon not quite an inch wide, and nearly a finger in length. These tabs are run through narrow ladders of cut jet. The tabs in the middle, front, and back are a little longer than the rest, and all terminate in grelot tassels. This is applied flat on a high corsage, with the tabs spreading outward from the collar like the sticks of a fan. Ornaments of the same character, but larger, are made for the skirt and tunics. There are also girdles, finished as above described, at the lower edge, and very handsome wrap ornaments and pelerine trimmings in jet and moire ribbon. There are also very expensive shoulder capes in silk and beads, in pointed trellis designs, made to exactly match both dress and bodice garnitures. When there is no cape, there are very elegant epaulets to place on the top of the sleeves, or instead of these, when the shoulders are too high to wear them, a very long, slender ornament, which trims the sleeve from the armhole down to the elbow.

For autumn travelling costumes, plain fine wools elegantly braided, and Dundee twills, camel's-hair fabrics, and serges checked or striped will be in greatest use. Black alpaca or black mohair combined with moire will continue to be an exceedingly popular gown with tourists who wish to travel with little baggage and still appear well dressed at hotel tables en route. Dust does not easily catch to these glossy fabrics, and they are cool, lady-like, and not expensive. In the cloth costume, however elegant the gown may be in fit, finish, and fabric, the more nearly it approaches the severe tournureless, undraped riding habit in style, the more in accordance it is with the mode of to-day. The extremist, however, who wholly discards any fulness whatever at the back, dispensing with even the slight suggestion of a tournure, and eschewing even a dainty curving loop or fold, goes as much in the way of making herself a conspicuous object of comment as the human dromedaries of past seasons went to the other extreme with their steels and springs.

The Magazines.

All boys will enjoy the frontispiece of the August Wide Awake, The Crisis, a wild Canadian river-scene; also the accompanying story of peril and pluck, Saved on the Brink, by Macdonald Oxley; and both boys and girls will have great fun over James Otis' complete serial, A Necktie Party, for it is a jolly story. One of the most beautiful things in the number is by May Kendall, an English writer, the author of the novel That Very Mab; it is a parable entitled The Temple of Music.

In The Elephants of an Indian Prince Miss Risley Seward offers the young folks the most entertaining elephant article ever written, all from her own experience with the finest elephants of Asia. Pets in Arab Life, by Eleanor Lewis, has some beautiful pictures and some very amusing anecdotes. There is a charming little tale for little folks by Katharine Macquoid, about two little girls and A Sabot.

Edward Everett Hale writes about Boston Common, as it was in Revolutionary Days, and the bright ... Henry Bacon's shield, Plucky Smalls, shows how the Government decorated Plucky with a medal—this story is altogether delightful.

Margaret Sidney contributes a charming poem, The Little Town-Maid, which is a most pathetic appeal for a universal Country Week. There are many other attractions—a pretty paper by Mrs. Frances A. Humphrey about The English Daisy, written among English dairies, an article on Hans Andersen, an account of the baby Buddhas in Thibet by Mrs. Leonowens, instructions how to make a handy microscope, together with Tangles, Letters from Children, poems, prize-questions, and pictures.

20 cents a number. D. Lothrop Company, Boston.

The Teacher
Who advised her pupils to strengthen their minds by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, appreciated the truth that bodily health is essential to mental vigor. For persons of delicate and feeble constitution, whether young or old, this medicine is remarkably beneficial. Be sure you get Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring and fall I take a number of bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and am greatly benefited."—Mrs. James H. Eastman, Stoneham, Mass.

"I have taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla with great benefit to my general health."—Miss Thirza L. Crerar, Palmyra, Md.

"My daughter, twelve years of age, has suffered for the past year from General Debility.

A few weeks since, we began to give her Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Her health has greatly improved."—Mrs. Harriet H. Battles, South Chelmsford, Mass.

"About a year ago I began using Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for debility and neuralgia resulting from malarial exposure in the army. I was in a very bad condition, but six bottles of the Sarsaparilla, with occasional doses of Ayer's Pills, have greatly improved my health. I am now able to work, and feel that I cannot say too much for your excellent remedies."—F. A. Pinkham, South Molunkus, Me.

"My daughter, sixteen years old, is using Ayer's Sarsaparilla with good effect."—Rev. S. J. Graham, United Brethren Church, Buckhannon, W. Va.

"I suffered from

Nervous Prostration,

with lame back and headache, and have been much benefited by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I am now 76 years of age, and I am satisfied that my present health and prolonged life are due to the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Mrs. ... ... Killingly, Conn.

Mrs. Ann H. ..., ... years old, ... Worcester, ... "After several weeks' suffering from nervous prostration, I procured a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken half of it my ... health returned."

A FRIGHTFUL SKIN DISEASE.
Sufferings Intense. Head nearly raw. Body covered with Sores. Cured by the Cuticura Remedies.
Messrs. Stevens & Bruner, Monroe, N. C.
Dear Sirs,—About two months ago, on your recommendation, I bought a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, one box Cuticura Salve, and one cake of Cuticura Soap, for my son aged thirteen years, who has been afflicted with eczema for a long time, and I am pleased to say that I believe the remedies have cured him. His sufferings were intense, his head being nearly raw, his ears being gone except the gristle, and his body was covered with sores. His condition was frightful to behold. The sores have now all disappeared, his skin is healthy, eyes bright, cheerful in disposition, and is working every day. My neighbors are witnesses to this remarkable cure, and the doubting ones are requested to call or write me, or any of my neighbors.
W. M. STEPHENSON,
Winchester P. O., Union Co., N. C.
Monroe, N. C., Oct. 29, 1887.
The Potter Drug and Chemical Co.:
Gentlemen,—Mr. Wm. S. Stephenson of this county brought his son to town to-day to let us see him, and to show what Cuticura Remedies had done for him. This is the case referred to in our letter to you some time ago. To look at the boy now, one would suppose that there had never been anything the matter with him,—seems to be in perfect health. We have written and herewith inclose what his father has to say about the matter,—wrote it just as he dictated.
We are selling quite a quantity of Cuticura Remedies and hear nothing but praises for them. We regard the Cuticura Remedies the best in the market, and shall do all we can to promote their sale.
Yours truly, STEVENS & BRUNER, Druggists and Pharmacists.
CUTICURA, the great skin cure, and Cuticura Soap prepared from it, externally, and Cuticura Resolvent, the new blood purifier, internally, are a positive cure for every form of skin and blood disease, from pimples to scrofula.
Sold everywhere. Price, Cuticura, 50c.; Soap, 25c.; Resolvent, $1.00. Prepared by the Potter Drug and Chemical Co., Boston, Mass.
Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases," 64 pages, 50 illustrations, and 100 testimonials.
PIMPLES, black heads, red, rough, chapped and oily skin prevented by Cuticura Soap.

A SUMMER PRESCRIPTION.

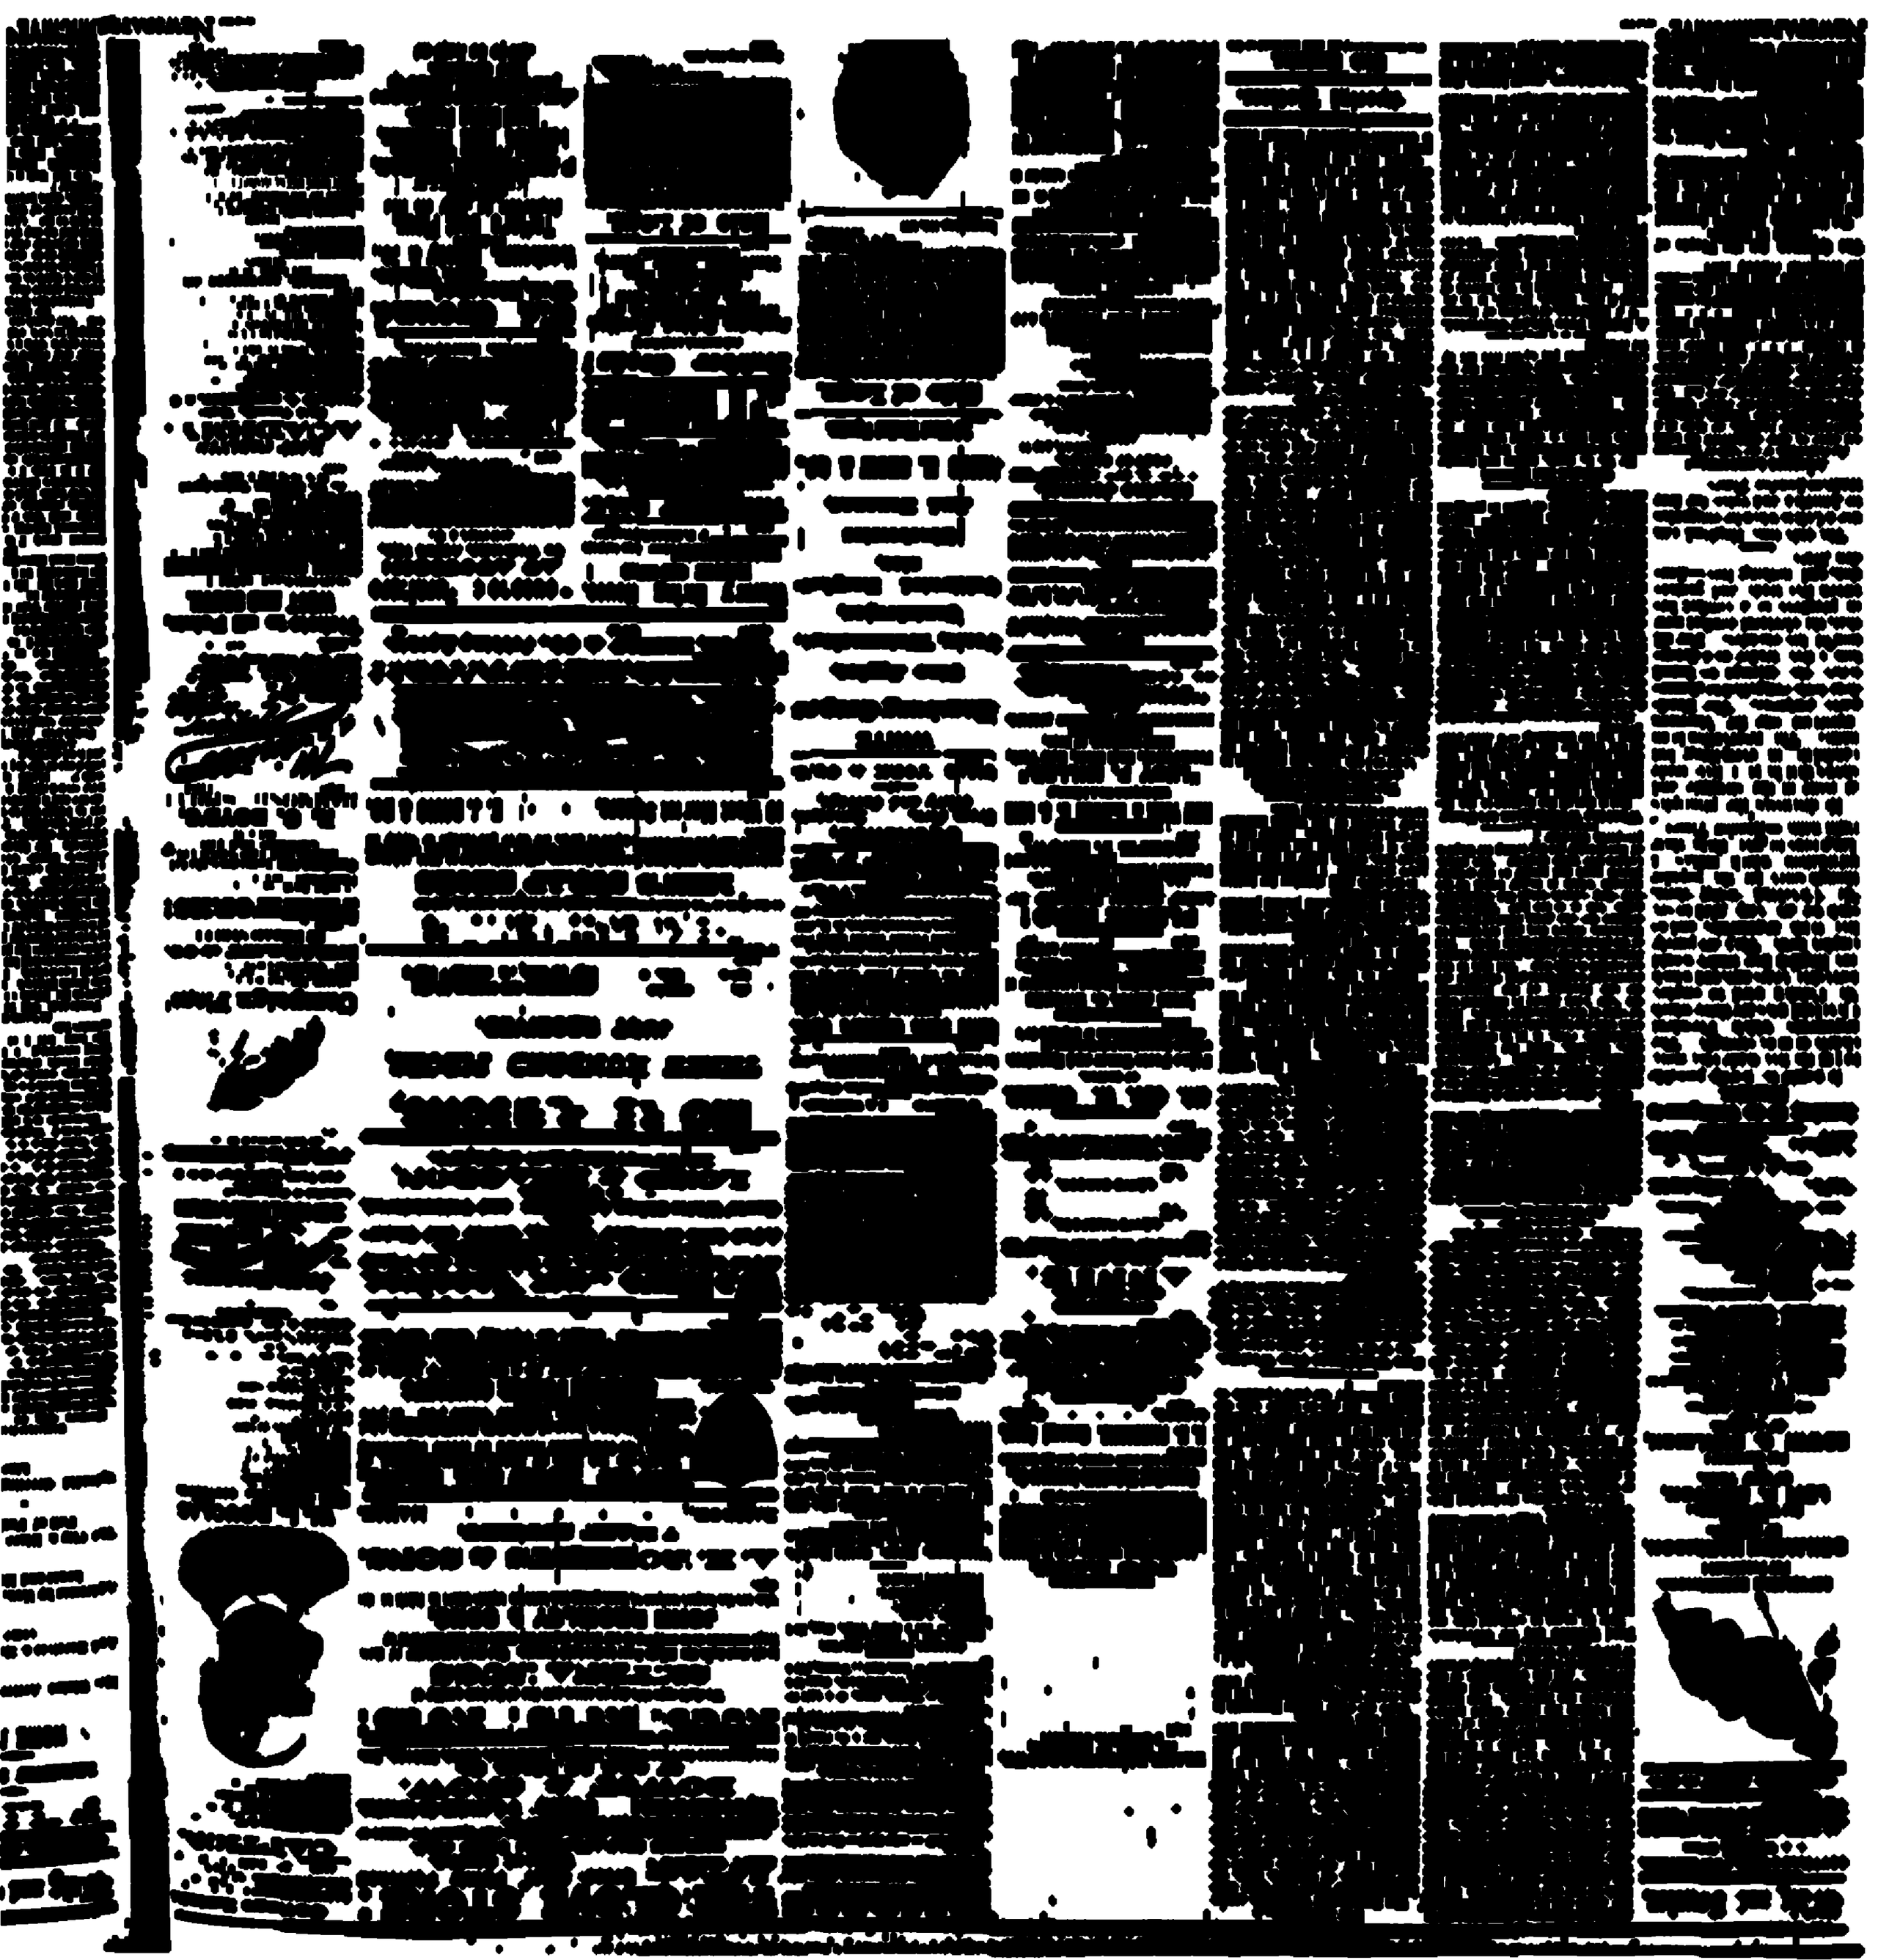

EXPOSURE to a chill during the drive, or to night air, or unexpected change of temperature is a most frequent cause of sudden stomach ills, which all should guard against by a timely cup of Ginger Tea made from Sanford's Ginger, a most popular and delicious preventive of summer ills.
This unrivalled household panacea and delicious summer medicine is an original combination of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, vastly superior to all other "gingers."
It instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer ills, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when stopped by a chill—a frequent cause of stomach troubles—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.
Beware of "gingers" urged in place of SANFORD'S GINGER.
Sold by all Druggists and Grocers.

PAINS and WEAKNESSES
OF FEMALES

The awe-struck audience gazed
On the figure, gaunt and gray,
Twas the murdered king, or the ghost of him,
And Hamlet was the play
His hour was brief, he said,
He must go ere light of day,
To the place of torments prepared for him,
Till his sins were purged away.
Yes, purged was the word he used.
And I thought what a remedy rare
Would Pierce's Purgative Pellets prove,
In his case, then and there

Dr Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets have no equal as a cathartic in derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. Small, pleasant in action, and purely vegetable. d&w1w aug14

Impurities of the blood often cause great annoyance at this season. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood and cures all such affections.

"What's form a beauty but an air divine, Through which the mind's all gentler graces shine."

This may be good logic in poetry but in real life "the mind's all gentler graces shine" to better advantage when enclosed in a sound physique. Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases. aug14 d&w1w

.7 WON'T BAKE BREAD —In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills. They will please you. d&w1w aug8
